INSPIRATION FOR THIS MENU

For the winter 2022 menu, we used a vintage art deco theme, highlighting the classic cocktails and methods of the roaring 20's and prohibition. Following that exploration, in Spring 2023's menu we came to the present, with a menu made entirely of my creations and my takes on some favorite classics, with a menu design motif reminiscent of the muscle cars and themes of the '60's and '70s.

Now, we come to the menu I was the most excited about producing when determining my menu arc for the year. TIKI!

A throwback to the Tiki Culture of the 1940s-1970s, this tiki menu matches the idealistic look of the Polynesian culture found in American movies and 1950s newly-jetsetting American tourist's memories of the South Pacific in themed bars and restaurants. Many of these drinks were created by two famous Tiki Bartenders- Trader Vic and Don the Beachcomber, largely considered the two founders of the tiki bar.

These boozy, rum centric, cocktails are some of the most dynamic cocktails ever created. They lean on the complexity of one of the most compelling spirits found in the world- Rum. Often disliked by many due to poor quality, often artificially flavored "rum" like spirits drunk in too high of quantities at a young age, true rum is amazingly diverse and intensely flavored. Able to be created anywhere sugar cane can be grown- primarily the Caribbean and Central America- but also South America, Africa, Southeast Asia, Australia and even the Southeastern United States.

There are Seven primary types of rum. Light, Gold, Dark, Black, Rhum Agricole, Cachaça and Overproof, with 3 different production types. Light rum & Gold rums are the ones most commonly found in the US. Either lightly aged from anywhere 3 months to 5 years in oak- or completely unaged- these typically column still produced rums are lightly flavored and an easy mixer in drinks. Gold rum is the same as light rum, but with additional caramel coloring added. Dark Rum is rum aged anywhere from 6-25(!) years. Black rum is dark rum with added molasses, which sweetens and darkens the product further. Rhum Agricole is different- it uses fresh cane juice, distilled to a high 70% ABV, not molasses or other sugar production byproduct. It has a clean, strong vegetal taste. Cachaça is similar to Rhum Agricole, but must be produced in Brazil and is usually distilled to a lower proof. It is often aged in Amburana wood barrels, which can add a unique level of cinnamon and baking spice flavors. Lastly, Overproof Rum is a different class of rum purely based on its strength, sold at a very high proof. Two famous types of overproof rum is "Navy Strength" (The British Navy) at 57% ABV and 151, sold at 151 Proof, or 75.5% ABV. It does not distinguish on production method or originating sugar source. There are three primary production methods- Pot Still, Column Still and Agricole. Agricole is simply that of the type listed above- using fresh cane juice. Pot Still rum is popular in Jamaica, Barbados and other islands of the Caribbean. Pot Still Rums in Jamaica are known for their inclusion of heavy esters, fatty acids and other naturally produced alcoholic chemical compounds that provide unique flavors. Column Stills are a continuous and efficient distillation type that produces a cleaner rum with fewer heavy esters and other compounds, but are no less tasty

Welcome to the tiki bar!
